I Wayan Wastawa:

Thank you for submitting the manuscript, "Communication Theology in Relief Sculptures at Maduwe Karang Temple" to the International Journal of Communication. We sincerely appreciate your interest and look forward to reading your manuscript. To support transparency in our process, and to facilitate the consideration of your paper, the following is a brief description of the procedures we will follow to evaluate it for publication:

- 1) The manuscript will be reviewed by the journal editors who will determine if it should undergo further review. If so, appropriate peer reviewers are selected based on their subject expertise and knowledge of the topic that a manuscript covers. (Book Reviews will be reviewed by our Section Editors.)
- 2) Each manuscript selected for external blind peer review undergoes at most, three rounds of refereeing. The review process can range in time depending on the number of refereed rounds the manuscript must undergo, as well as how quickly the referees complete their respective reviews.
- 3) As soon as the editorial office has received all responses from the peer reviewers, a publication decision is made. The decision will be either to accept the paper (which is sometimes accompanied by a request for revisions), suggest certain revisions and withhold a final decision until those changes are made, or decline the submission. Suggested revisions will usually consist of those requested by the peer reviewers, although the editors sometimes offer additional input.
- 4) Manuscripts that are accepted will subsequently be copy edited.

As IJoC is an online, multi-media, academic journal, we welcome multi-media material such as video clips and artwork that you may wish to embed in your article.

Using our online journal management system, you will be able to track your manuscript's progress through the editorial process by logging in to the journal Web site: <http://ijoc.org>. If you have any questions about our review process, please contact the editorial office.
