I Nengah Lestawi, Dewi Bunga:

We have reached a decision regarding your submission to European Journal of Environmental Sciences, "The Role of Customary Law in The Forest Preservation in Bali".

Our decision is to: Decline Submission

After a careful reading I came to the conclusion that the paper is not publishable in EJES and will not be sent to the reviewers. The reasons are as follows.

The paper is very immature, not focused and deals with topic of only a local importance. For being publishable, the paper must clearly state, what is new here, why the research is done, why is it important, what are the main results and why these are important. The results must be novel and interesting for the broad audience of EJES. It is not the case now.

Even formally it does not comply with the regulations stated in the Author guidelines, which by itself implies immediate rejection.

I am sorry for not being able to convey you a more positive decision and wish you success in publishing a strongly revised version in the future.
